Political Parties Form on OU

Political conversations are becoming more and more common with the reorganizing of the young Republican and Democrat parties at OU.

Both parties are rallying and campaigning for members. Registrations are being taken inside the east door of the Student Center.

The chairman of the Democratic party, Jerry Singer, and his rival Republican, John Howard, agreed on the purposes of the organizations—to stimulate interest in politics and government.

"A third of a person's income goes to the government," said Howard, "so every person has a vital interest in the government."

"Bad government is the result of a lack of interest and voting," added Singer, "and we're trying to bolster student interest."

The membership drives are going even better than expected, they said. Both parties are nearing goals of 100 active members. Membership in the parties is open to students of any age.

Candidates take the campus parties seriously, too, they said, and candidates analyze student opinion as carefully as public.

Other officers of the Republicans are Bruce Leper and Lyle Franzen, publicity, and Lonnie Hansen and Sonja Ruckl, secretaries. William Utley and Dr. Edmund McCurtain are sponsors.

The Democrats are Ted Carlsen, vice-chairman; Leni Wine and Barbara Griffin, secretaries, and Dr. J. S. McCrary and Dr. Thomas H. Bonner, sponsors.

NAM Presidents Speaks—

College Education Good for Business World

"A college education provides an invaluable background for newcomers in today's business world. It helps them understand what generates a dynamic economy."

This is the opinion of Rudolf F. Bannow, President of the National Association of Manufacturers in a Gateway interview. The words are of special significance because the NAM president did not have the aid of a college education in his rise from apprentice pattern-maker to the present NAM position.

Competition in the business world has become more and more intense, he stated. "100 years ago, 86 per cent of the people in this country worked on farms. Today, the figure is 11 per cent. This is one reason for the rise in competition."

Regarding a preference for the best-equipped college graduate on the job-seeking springboard, Bannow favors liberal arts courses. "Initially, the step into modern industry can be a frustrating experience. The well-rounded aspect of liberal arts enables a person to see the whole picture of big business."

Bannow, born in Gothenburg, Sweden and educated in the public schools of that city, immigrated to the United States in 1910. He established his own business in 1927 with the purchase of a pattern and model works in Bridgeport, Conn.

At present, he is co-owner of Bridgeport Machines, Inc., founded in 1939. "Our Company employs over 400 people, and I am proud to say that we have not had a personnel lay-off in twenty years," he said.

Bannow's comments on education and industry followed his April 20 address to the Omaha Rotary Club, attended by a Gateway representative.

As a member of a recently appointed committee, he is investigating the possibilities of foreign trade expansion by the United States.

"The best thing we can do to enhance the growth of foreign trade is to become more competitive. This means more goods and better quality for the foreign markets," he said.

Regarding future prospects for our industrial organizations, he believes that an important factor is the American consumer. "We have not solved the problem of 'busts' in economy because the consumer has unpredictable buying habits."

Bannow hopes that the younger generation will have not less opportunity than this country afforded to a Swedish lad who was skillful with his hands and far-sighted in his thinking.

Book Sale Nets 1129 Bids— Bookworms 'Eat Up' Library's Book Auction

By Barbara Butler

OU's "bookworms" came out of hibernation this spring with ravenous appetites.

The 244 books the library offered for sale in conjunction with their annual book auction netted a total of 1,129 bids.

Librarian Ellen Lord said "We are pleased very much, with the results. It shows increased interest on the part of the students by 1,129 times."

Bids increased by about 400 over last year, Miss Lord said she felt the interest indicated the sale was worthwhile.

Miss Lord emphasized the purpose of the sale was two-fold. The first objective was to interest the students in books. She said results in this area were so successful that a permanent browsing area is being planned for the lobby.

The other object of the sale, held each year in conjunction with national Library Week, is to help students in starting their own personal libraries.

This year's sale got at least one student off to a tremendous start on his own library for a relatively cheap price. He bid on almost half of the books but for relatively small amounts, usually between 25 and 60 cents. The sale's close brought him 32 books.

"This Hallowed Ground" by Bruce Catton brought in 38 bids and sold for about three dollars. Highest price honors went to "My Experiences in the World War", a two volume series which sold for $5.

Bookworms also proved they have business sense in their dealings. Miss Lord said this year many students bid an odd amount, one or two cents over an even price.

In most cases these odd bids won the books.

There is still a chance for those who didn't place first in the bidding to get a book this week.

Second high bidders will get a chance at the books that haven't yet been picked up. Phone calls will go out to those who get the books.

OU Grads Stage Plays at SUI

Two recent OU graduates, active in dramatics in their undergraduate days, have carried their talents to the Community Theater Program at Iowa City.

Allan Longacre is directing "The Diary of Anne Frank," the last play of the Theater's current season. Ken Leeper is set designer for the production.

Both men are graduate students at the State University of Iowa, and are using the work for thesis credit toward masters degrees. Longacre is a 1959 graduate of OU. Leeper was graduated in 1958.

Disc Jockey Duties As

Schmidt Joins 'Night People'

By Gary Swanson

For all you "night people" who enjoy listening to the radio while driving home from your Saturday night date, or sitting around playing bridge, or any of the other various Saturday night activities join Larry Schmidt.

Schmidt, an OU Radio and TV speech major, is on the other end of the air waves. Since March 12 he has been spinning the discs for KBON, but this isn't his first try at being a disc jockey.

Contest Winner

While attending high school, he entered the junior disc jockey contest sponsored by another local radio station. His show won the day he was on, and he worked his way up to the finals. Pay for the five minute program? Fifty dollars in prize money, not bad for the first time out.

Schmidt's life as a professional doesn't quite reap these kind of profits as far as money goes, but the experience almost makes up for the lack of dollars. He gets paid 12 dollars for spinning the discs from midnight Saturday night to 8 a. m. Sunday morning.

One Man Operation

His job is much more involved than simply spinning the discs. The whole eight-hour record is a one-man operation. Preparation starts about eleven o'clock when Schmidt comes in and starts updating the news he has to give on each half hour.

Next comes the selection of the records he will play that evening. Since the whole show is his, it is up to him to choose the records he wishes to play. The only stipulation is that he has to stick to a pattern of playing a vocal, an instrumental and then a record where the two are combined.

The show starts at midnight. Schmidt said, "This is where the problems arise. The biggest one is trying to stay awake."

A few of the minor problems which might be included are: ad libbing and announcing all records, giving all the newscasts, giving all the commercials except for the two or three that are taped, and running the transmitter.

Phone Calls Problem

While doing one of these jobs, he must get the next record cued up and ready to go on one of the four turntables placed around him.

Schmidt on the air.

Schmidt said, "Things also begin to get complicated when people call me. A couple of weeks ago someone called just as a record was ending. This was all right except that I didn't have the next record cued. There I was reaching for turntables on both sides of me and trying to carry on a conversation on the phone. It just doesn't work."

As the night drags on and he starts getting sleepy Schmidt said he has caught himself saying things such as, "Go out and see John Smith Snow and he'll show you some of his cream puff cars."

Shocking Incident

He said the most shocking incident that has happened to him since he started was when the power went off. He said, "It was about 12:20 and I was playing a record when all of a sudden there was nothing. They told me this happens every once in a while but I didn't think much about it when it happened."

He continued, "The station was off the air and I didn't know what happened. The disc jockey who had preceded me was down in the news room, but I couldn't make contact with him without leaving the booth. I ran down the hall and got help of one who knew. We got things fixed and the show went on."

There's the old saying "Practice makes perfect."

Sharon Engle Follows Current Trend in Popular Triple Role

There is a trend for more and more American wives to hold down outside jobs. Besides being a wife and homemaker, Mrs. Sharon Engle gets through early, she gets groceries and attends to other homemaker-type duties.

What does she do in her spare time? "I'm a golfer," she said, "but I'm not a pro yet." Asked what she usually shoots on nine holes, she answered, "let's just say I'm a duffer."

Mrs. Engle is the daughter-in-law of University Hostess Thelma Engle. Before going to work for the alumni office, Mrs. Engle worked in the registrar's office for three years. She attended OU for two-and-a-half years. Her husband Jim is in the 6,500 alumni files she works with, too, having been graduated last June.

"If I get off my schedule," Mrs. Engle said, "it throws me off for the whole day. But it's a lot of fun being a working wife," she said.

Mrs. Sharon Engle ... Golf

gle is also employed at OU as alumni secretary.

Mrs. Engle is practically a newly-wed (last November) and has found that she must live by a strict schedule. She's up at 6 a.m. to make breakfast for hubby Jim and herself. She cleans up the kitchen and makes the 7:20 bus to school. She leaves the alumni office at 4:45 p.m. and is home by 5:15.

Dinner is on the schedule for 6:30. After the dinner dishes have been cleaned up, the apartment remains to be tidied. This usually takes until 9 p.m., but when she

OU Graduate Wins Nat'l Science Grant

The mathematics department of the University of Omaha can add another feather to its cap. Tom Kezlan, a former OU student, was recently awarded a National Science Foundation Fellowship in mathematics.

Kezlan, who was graduated from OU in 1957, recently wrote to Dr. James Earl, mathematics department head. In his letter Kezlan stated that he felt that his courses here prepared him very well for his advanced studies. He is now working on a doctor's degree at the University of Kansas.

He also earned his masters degree at the University of Kansas. The content of his thesis was on differential equations. He is undecided at present whether to continue in this line of work or do his doctoral work in the unrelated field of the theory of groups. Kezlan has already completed most of his course work.

"We are always happy to have former students obtain recognition in fellowships," Earl stated. He added that a number of them have received such awards in recent years.

Mrs. Huntington . . . One more answer.

'Questions' to PBX Operator Endanger Gateway Staffer

By Pat Divis

"Questions, questions, questions. That's all I ever get around here, questions, questions, questions."

This mumbling a Gateway reporter could faintly hear issuing from behind a closed door. She was just beginning to have her doubts as to the timeliness of her coming interview when the door opened in response to her timid knock of a couple seconds before.

A pleasant-looking woman opened the door with a gleam in her eye, snatched her by the lapels of her trenchcoat and said, "What would you think if all you heard all day, every day were questions, questions, questions?"

Being her usual quick self, the reporter managed to stammer, "Huh, what," before she queried, "And what can I do for you?"

She tactfully answered, "I came to ask you some questions . . . and . . ."

She regarded her with a baleful stare but invited her inside the mysterious room whose always-closed door read "PBX, Mrs. Huntington." Recovering what was left of her confidence, the reporter opened her mouth to pose her first carefully-thought-out - beforehand question when a discreet buzzing cut her short.

"Just a moment," said the woman whom she assumed to be Mrs. Huntington and who turned to face a black board full of holes and wires—this she mused, must be the switchboard (notice the reporter's instinctive ability to sum up the situation.)

She cocked an ear to what was being said.

"Yes," said Mrs. Huntington. "We do have a sidewalk leading from Dodge Street to the campus. No, we do not have a 'med' school; what you want is the University of Nebraska Med School. What? No, this is the University of Omaha not Nebraska University. You want what, the Restoration Office?" She paused a moment then said, "You must mean the registrar's office, don't you?" Mrs. Huntington spoke in even, patient measured tones. "Shall I connect you? Thank you."

She put down the phone and said to me, "There, you see, questions, all day long. But wait, I'm forgetting why you're here. Now what was it you wanted?"

"I only need a few facts about the University's switchboard department. You are, I assume, Mrs. Huntington, switchboard operator for OU?"

"That's right," she answered. "Mrs. Corrada Huntington, and I've been running the switchboard here for ten years now."

"How did you happen to get the job?" the reporter asked, warming up to the task at hand.

"Oh through a friend," Mrs. Huntington answered. "This friend said I'd like working here, and I do, very much. Of course there are a lot of questions . . ."

"Have any assistants?" the reporter interrupted, steering her away from that touchy subject.

"Oh, yes," she countered. "Three, all students here: Janet Voss, Gerry Rice and Betty Erion."

"How do they like working the switchboard?" she prompted.

"Just fine," Mrs. Huntington brightly shot back. "Of course they get some of the craziest questions . . ."

"Your family," she said casting about desperately for a topic. "How about your family?"

"Well," she proudly answered. "I've got one married son and I'm a grandmother three times over."

"Fine," she said. "Just fine." (This interviewing was a snap once you got the hang of it.)

"Now just one more question . . ." she paused sensing she had somehow gone too far.

"Question," said Mrs. Huntington, her voice changing slightly in pitch. "Question?"

As the reporter hurriedly closed the door marked "PBX, Mrs. Huntington" behind her and ran at full tilt toward the Gateway office, she couldn't help thinking that all her interviews seem somehow to end this way.

Contest songs have been selected for the annual All-School Sing, Wednesday, May 18. The Sing is sponsored by Waokiya and Omicron Delta Kappa senior leadership honoraries.

OU Snack Bar Prepares to Open

The new snack bar will open sometime next week.

Marwin Wroldstad, business manager, told the Gateway that it should be open by Wednesday or Thursday.

He said that before it can open the contractors have to connect and test the equipment.

Hours will be 7 a. m. to 9:45 p. m. Monday through Saturday. There might be limited service on Sunday, depending upon the amount of business on that day.

Wroldstad added that the snack bar will be called the OUampi Room.

Students Drink Coffee Only in Snack Bar

No coffee will be available to students in the Administration Building when the new Student Center snack bar opens.

This word came from Dr. Donald Z. Woods, assistant to the president Wednesday.

"Our basic purpose is education," Woods said. "Coffee vending machines around every corner are not essential."

Woods added that there will be a small stand-up coffee room in the Administration Building for staff and faculty members in the former alumni office, Room 151.

Woods explained that most staff members have 15-minute breaks which "is not enough time to get to the Student Center for coffee."

Second-Hand Desk, Old Chair Turned in for Shiny Office

By Bill Jardine

"I just can't believe it's mine. I just keep thinking it's some one else's."

Those were the words of Margaret Killian this week when asked about her new office in the former Student Lounge.

The story of Miss Killian's office life is a sad tale indeed. For sixteen years Miss Killian has been head of the home economics department, but during all that time she has never had an office.

For years she has done all her paper work in a cramped space between the wall and the kitchen stove in the home ec room.

During her first three years at Omaha University she didn't even have a desk. Then one day, thirteen years ago, she found an old second-hand desk out in the hall. Later she found an old stuffed chair. Those two pieces of furniture, plus a filing cabinet, have been her only-office equipment up until now.

"Actually this will be the first time I've ever had an office," Miss Killian boasted. Before coming to Omaha University, she explained, she taught on campuses which had dormitories, and she used her own private facilities for her office space.

But Miss Killian has never complained. "I'd have been satisfied if I'd had nothing but an old tree stump to do my work," she said. In Miss Killian's new office will be a shiny new walnut desk, a smart new filing cabinet, and a handy book case. But there'll be one old piece of furniture—the old marred up desk she has used for years.

"I'm just too sentimental to give it up," she said.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

"I REFUSE YOUR QUESTION ON THE GROUNDS MY ANSWER MAY TEND TO INCRIMINATE ME."

The Backlash— Any Pros in The Crowd?

We notice in a story elsewhere on this page that the men's P.E. department is revamping its curriculum, placing new emphasis on the so-called individual sports.

This, we think, is a mighty fine idea.

Today's living is allowing more and more time for recreation and personal endeavor and many men are finding themselves at a loss for what to do with it.

The policy of requiring two years of P.E. prior to graduation has, since its inception, furnished no more than good exercise for a couple undergraduate years.

Certainly not many graduates went into the world and applied what they learned about football and basketball. It did, perhaps, furnish them with a good background to enable better enjoyment of their Saturday and Sunday afternoons in front of the TV set—but not much more.

The change in program makes the classes indeed worthwhile. So long as you have to take the courses, you might as well get something out of them.

First to mind at this time of year is a course in golf.

"Cow pasture pool" is today enjoying a boom much like the one enjoyed by bowling a number of years ago. Drive by Fontenelle Park any Sunday morning if you doubt these words.

Having the opportunity to learn the fundamentals of the game under classroom conditions should be well appreciated and accepted.

Professional golf, thanks to wide TV coverage, is also drawing greater interest than at any time in the past.

Like professional football, the Sunday afternoon programs have a large following and have made the public familiar with many of the pros who would otherwise have had their fame confined to the agate type in the sports sections.

A cover story in this week's Time Magazine tells of Arnold Palmer, probably the top golfer in the business today.

The son of a Pennsylvania greenskeeper and sometime pro, Palmer went through Wake Forest University with a golf scholarship.

His college golfing went much further than a P.E. class but everybody can't be the son of a pro. The classes might well introduce to the game men who otherwise would never have handled a club.

What's more, there may be some latent talent that could be brought out and a pro might be born.

According to the Time bit, that's a pretty lucrative profession.

Palmer, they report, "seems certain to break Ted Kroll's record tournament earnings of $72,835.83 in 1956."

That's a lot of golf balls.

They point out that the 1960 golf tournament circuit winnings will be $1,600,000. The figure is ten times that of 1939.

And besides the money, there's the fringe benefits.

Time reveals that Palmer's wardrobe includes 36 Munsingwear shirts—an item Arnie endorses. He likes Footjoy shoes (travels with 15 pairs) and Sun State slacks (30 pairs).

Wilson Sporting Goods pays him $6,500 a year for using their clubs. He gets bonuses as high as $3,500 for using the clubs to win a major tournament, according to the article.

Whether Russ Gorman's department can steer any of you into such green pastures or not is yet to be seen. But if they do no more than acquaint some new blood with the links, their efforts will not be passed off as one of those "take it and forget it" classes.

Ike enjoys it—maybe you will too.

In case you don't have a parachute, he will let you borrow his equipment for the first couple of jumps.

'Valuable Change' Made In Phys Ed Class Requirements

A major change in the men's physical education curriculum has been announced by Department Head Russ Gorman.

Individual and dual sports will receive the emphasis formerly devoted to team sports in the regular classes.

"The object is to give the students fundamental help in the activities they are more apt to participate in after college," Gorman said.

"Very few men do much competing in basketball or football in later life," he continued.

The new program will include golf, tennis, bowling and other wide-participation sports.

Gorman pointed out that most students receive four or five years of physical education training in team sports prior to coming to OU and the present curriculum is merely repetitious.

The change comes after several years of studying PE departments on other campuses. The new program strongly resembles the set-up at the University of Indiana, Gorman said.

PE requirements will remain the same, that is, everyone without military service or participation in two years of ROTC must complete four semesters of PE work.

Physical Education majors will be required to take four semesters under the new program in addition to their regular advanced classes.

The new schedule calls for first semester enrollment in PE 111 (Personal Health and Hygiene) followed by three semesters of such activities as archery, badminton, fly and bait casting, fencing, tennis, wrestling, swimming, tumbling, senior life saving and other such sports.

Gorman indicated the change will require the purchase of new equipment and a doubling-up on some facilities but that "the new program will greatly increase the value of the classes."

Indians Win Tourney Berth By Downing Creighton, 7-3

Capitalizing on 11 Creighton errors, the OU baseballers captured their eighth win and a berth in the NAIA district playoffs last week.

They will meet a yet to be announced opponent in the opening tourney round in Sioux City, Ia., late in May.

The Indians played below their usual par in handing the Bluejays their first loss in five games, 7-3.

Only one of the OU tallies was earned.

Score Tied At 3-3

One hit in the first inning produced three runs for the Indians while Creighton was committing five errors.

An OU error in the top of the fifth coupled with two hits and a pair of walks allowed the Creightons to knot the score at three-all.

But the Indians bounced back with two more runs in the bottom of that inning, thanks to two more Creighton errors, one before and one after Larry Kozeny smashed a long triple.

Weather Hampers Aden

George Casper took advantage of another Jay error in the bottom of the eighth and managed to make it to first base.

He scored on Pitcher Dave Aden's double. Aden made it to third on an infield out and crossed the plate for the final tally of the night on a sacrifice fly.

Aden was noticeably bothered by the chilly night, giving up five hits. Usually stingy on both hits and walks, he was in trouble most of the night. He allowed six bases on balls but had fine play in the field to back him up.

No More Nebraskans

Tom Fretz, Creighton's right-hander moundsman pitched the better game, notching eight strikeouts. He gave up four hits and six walks.

It was not enough to offset the work of his butter-fingered teammates, however.

A sparse crowd of about seven hundred watched the crudely played contest.

The game was the final effort against a Nebraska team. The remainder are against Iowans, Kansans and Missourians.

Golfers Move Out, 5-1-1 Total So Far

OU's golf team is in full swing this season. The Indian golfers compiled a five-one-one, win-loss-tie record in their first five matches.

The team will play two matches next week. Monday they will go against Midland College at Fremont. Thursday the OU golfers will take on Drake University on the home links.

In the first match of the year, a triangular in Topeka, Kan., they scored a win over Baker College 11-4 and tied Washburn University 7½-7½. On the same road trip they downed Kansas State University's golfers 11-4.

The third meet, with Nebraska University, was the first loss of the season. Nebraska downed the OUers 9-6.

On April 21 OU's Indians got back on the winning trail, walking over St. Benedict's College and Emporia State 12½-2½ and 8½-6½, in what proved to be an easy triangular win.

OU took its fifth win of the season Monday. They dropped Grinnell College 8½-6½ on the home course.

Thursday, the OU golfers pitted their skills against Doane College and Hastings College, in a triangular, in Lincoln.

Netmen Drop Four Of Six Decisions

The University tennis team is sporting a two-win, four-loss record with half of the season over.

OU's netmen blanked cross town rival Creighton University 7-0 in the first match of the season.

However, on their first road trip the OU tennis players didn't fare too well. They dropped the first match of the road trip to Washburn University 5-2. The following day they lost to a tough Kansas State University team 6-1. Three of the four OU-KU matches were three set matches.

Nebraska University handed the OUers their third defeat, a close decision 4-3.

April 23 OU dropped its fourth match in a row to Iowa State University. The Iowans took an easy 6-1 victory.

Tuesday OU turned the tables and dropped Drake University's tennis men 7-2.

Thursday they matched skill with Nebraska for the second time. Friday Doane College played host to the OU tennis men. Results of the last two matches did not reach the Gateway sports desk by deadline.

Monday the OU team will be guests of Midland College in Crete.

Full Schedule Ahead For Girls in WRA

WRA has a full schedule ahead with the opening of spring sports.

The intramural girls' track meet will be held on Tuesday, May 3, on the Omaha University football field. Any OU girl may enter the meet.

On Saturday, May 7, the Omaha University WRA will be host for the annual High School Play Day. High school girls from Omaha and Council Bluffs are invited to come to OU to participate in sporting events.

Members of Pre-Orchosis will perform for the Play Day. They will give their interpretations of different sports.

Members of Orchosis have been kept busy with their spring concert April 29-30, a performance at Technical High School on May 10, and a Pre-Orchosis presentation at the Sheraton-Fontenelle Hotel on May 14.

The Omaha University modern dance group has ordered Orchosis pins. They are the first Orchosis club in the nation with a pin.

Recruiting Practices Hit by Two Delegates from Athletic Ass'ns.

Officials from two national athletic associations were on campus during the past weeks.

Art Bergstrom and Al Duer, representing the NCAA and NAIA respectively, were here at the invitation of the school to discuss the major problems of athletics in general, and the University in particular.

Duer spent last Friday talking over the problems of recruiting, athletic budgets and "about every topic concerning athletics that came to our mind," said the Executive Secretary of the NAIA.

Bergstrom visited OU just before Easter vacation.

Competition "Unsound"

He stressed that the NCAA plans to give more attention to smaller colleges in the future.

"We feel that there is too much possibility that the smaller schools are being left out of the athletic picture," he commented.

Duer talked to all of the coaches and the faculty committee on athletics.

He termed the intense competition for subsidy of athletes "unsound."

"Furthermore, college presidents and athletic officials throughout the country are coming to realize that college sports will not survive in the future if the various schools do not meet and agree on procurement of athletes on an equal basis."

"While this idea may not be popular with some of the big schools, the problem must nevertheless be faced," he added.

"So many schools are limited by drawing power that the great bulk of athletes are going to only those schools which can afford such a luxury."

"Reckless Race"

Duer said that two problems are continually emphasized by an increasing number of college presidents:

—Lack of gate receipts.
—Increasing costs for athletics.
"The small schools are particularly plagued by these problems.

Therefore any small institution is bound to have a fluctuating level of success. What was originally intended as a means of providing college athletics, in other words, the athletic program of a school, has turned into a reckless race to make a name for the school," he said.

Interest 'Not Lagging'

Duer emphasized that the NAIA is seeking to make athletics into a more well rounded program in which more persons participate instead of promoting competition among schools.

"Where one institution has outstanding success and others fail, the whole system fails," Mr. Duer continued. "Institutions that are short sighted don't want to see this well rounded program come about. But those officials that I have talked to are agreeable to the plan if they are able to grasp the total picture."

The belief that college students are becoming less interested in sports is not held by Duer.

"Since the start of the national meet program in the various associations, many more students, proportionally speaking, are participating in all types of athletics, especially intramurals. And the NAIA considers intramurals just as vital to a college program as the varsity sports."

Ouampi's History to Be Told Next Week

Everyone on campus is familiar with the tough-looking little Indian who carries the OU banner at sporting events and on notebooks and book covers.

But how many know where he came from; how long he's been on campus; where he got his name?

Next week's Gateway will carry the full biography of Ouampi. His birth wasn't overnight or by chance. And he's still pretty young.

WRA Offers Participation for 'Every Woman on Campus'

By Gail Grove

"A program for every organization—a sport for every individual."

With this motto the Women's Recreation Association is organized to promote sports and recreational activities for all University of Omaha women.

The group's objective is listed as: "giving the opportunity for every individual, regardless of her ability, to realize the joy and fun of participation in her favorite sport against good competition."

First known as Omaha University Women's Intramurals, WRA handles all girls' sports at the school.

National Affiliation

Membership is open to all women who participate in any two intramural programs or hold membership in a WRA club and participate in one sport.

Orchosis, the Bowling Club and the Rifle Club are among the more recent additions to the association.

The OU chapter is affiliated with both the state and national Athletic and Recreation Federation of College Women.

Honor Teams Named

Members receive "Sportlight," the national monthly newsletter and are extended invitations to national, state and regional conventions.

Climaxing the year's activities of WRA is the annual awards banquet, being held this year May 17. Trophies go to outstanding individuals and teams. A rotating trophy is awarded to the team compiling the greatest number of points during the year. An outstanding member of Orchosis is also cited.

Other honors include the All Star and Honor basketball and volleyball teams.

For social gatherings, WRA members attend the annual membership picnic in the fall, a Christmas party, the Watersports Show and the Orchosis Concert.

And to interest the high school set, a "Play Day" is held each year for Omaha area high school girls. This year's is scheduled for May 7.

The WRA Board, which included representatives from each affiliated organization, meets weekly to plan all the group's activities.

Other members include: Alpha Xi Delta, Chi Omega, Sigma Kappa, Zeta Tau Alpha, ISA and Unaffiliated.

No test of creed is necessary for membership but official membership is issued from the national office in Yellow Springs, Ohio.

Reif stated that any one interested in learning more about the group and its aims is urged to attend the first meeting.

Chi Omegas Take Social Probation Under Protest

Chi Omega sorority has been placed on social probation for violating Panhellenic Council rush rules.

A formal complaint, filed by Alpha Xi Delta and Sigma Kappa sororities, was read and voted upon at the April 20 meeting of Panhellenic Council. The complaint stated that Chi Omega alumnae held a tea with their pre-college daughters, at which Chi Omega' actives were present.

The complaint was a revision of an original one filed April 11, two days after the tea. The original, which was disproved, stated that one daughter was there without her alumni mother.

According to present Panhellenic rules, the sorority cannot participate in any social activities until June. Ma-ie Day and school elections are the only exceptions.

Margaret Killian, Chi Omega campus adviser, said the group is accepting the probation period under protest. She said the accepted complaint was beyond the 48-hour period of reporting, and that the Council could only assume the daughters would attend OU.

SAC Seeks OU Counseling

Emery, Gorman to Travel to London, Madrid On SAC Overseas Education Program

Headquarters of the Strategic Air Command has requested and contracted for the University of Omaha to evaluate their education program overseas. SAC desires that the University provide counseling to Air Force education personnel in order to bring current education programs to the highest possible level.

In connection with this program, Dean of the College of Adult Education Donald Emery and Dr. Frank Gorman, Dean of the College of Education, are flying to London and Madrid on May 8.

Visit Overseas

They will conduct educational conferences at the SAC base in London on May 10 to 13, and at Torrejon Air Force Base near Madrid on May 16 to 19. They will return to the University on May 22.

Emery will discuss the Air Force's higher education program and will provide counseling on management and counseling techniques, libraries, teaching aid resources, principles of operating educational programs and a general discussion of problems encountered.

Elementary and secondary schools in the overseas bases will be visited by Gorman. He will evaluate the quality of the curriculum, organization, administration and instructional practices of dependent schools.

Gorman stated that "the Air Force is concerned with offering the best possible education to their dependent children," and has therefore requested that the University make this survey and offer recommendations for improvement wherever possible.

The program was coordinated by Ben. Zeff, Director of Education for SAC, at Offutt AFB.

March Conference Planned

The educational conference in London is expected to gather about 30 education officers from Air Force Bases in England. An attendance of around 20 from bases in Spain and Morocco is planned for Madrid.

The University has offered off duty higher education to Air Force personnel at Offutt since 1950. These courses are considered resident classes. For the past three years the Air Force has had an extension of this program to other bases under consideration. Five SAC educational conferences have been held here over the past ten years. Another is planned in March. This, however, is the first time that this program has been extended to overseas bases.

"The Air Force has requested this trip," Emery stated. "I feel it is the hope of SAC that with the successful experience we have had with our program at Offutt, and the contribution we have made, over the years, with our domestic program, that some of the experience we have had and the insight we have gained can bring about some degree of continued improvement in the educational programs of SAC bases in England, Spain and Morocco."
